The Evolution of Policy on Community Conservation

8 Institutions

PART TWO

The Evolution of Policy on Community Conservation

...
The Evolution of a Community-Based Approach to Resource Management

PART FOUR

Devolution of Management

Chapter 11

The Evolution of a Community-Based Approach to Resource Management

Brian Jones

To Wildlife Management at Kunene, Namibia
The interaction of a community and non-governmental organizations (NGOs) is crucial for effective development and disaster response. The role of NGOs in providing support and assistance to communities in times of crisis cannot be overstated. These organizations are often on the front lines, providing vital services such as shelter, food, and medical care to those in need.

In the context of disaster management, the role of NGOs is particularly important. They are often able to respond more quickly and efficiently than government agencies, as they are not bound by the same bureaucratic procedures. NGOs also have the flexibility to adapt their strategies based on the specific needs of the community they are working with.

The relationship between NGOs and communities is based on trust and mutual respect. NGOs must work closely with community leaders to ensure that their assistance is tailored to the specific needs of the community. This requires a deep understanding of the local culture and context.

In conclusion, the role of NGOs in disaster management is essential. They provide critical support to communities during times of crisis, and their efforts are vital in ensuring that those affected receive the assistance they need.